Not illustrated. 1779 Excerpt: .which must daily occur to every man in his observations upon the manners of the present times, can only be solved. into something like an eld adage--that we are grown too indecent in our actions to bear with the least semblance of them in the works of authors. Hence we have sentimental plays, without sense or character novels inapplicable to the manners of the age, and, in all other productions of amusement, except where individuals are attacked, so prolific are we in our ideas of chastity, that nothing which is marked with the exact likeness of our pursuits will be suffered. This pest of refinement, under the article of delicacy, will not admit of plain truths, exhibited in the indignant style of a satirist who feels what he writes, and who utters the genuine sentiments of his heart. We must be tickled with our crimes; and...
