This will be seen on examining the tables, giving the summary of results, or comparing the curves 00 and EE, with GG and DD, and AA with FF. Plate IX. This difference, since it occurs to almost the same extent in the turned specimen as in those tested full size, is very probably not so much (or perhaps not at all) due to the superiority of the surface-metal as to the method of testing and the manner in which the extensions were marked, the mark denoting the extension for the corresponding load being made before the latter had time to produce the full effect on the specimens. 3d. That the total extension averages about 25 per cent. , and that the fractured section is reduced on an average to 63. 5 per cent....
