Not illustrated. 1906 Excerpt: .I should be willing, by way of test, that they should send their best speaker down here, --say Wendell Phillips himself; I d like to see him, anyhow. I would assemble my people out there in the grove, and he should speak to them. And when he had finished, I would say to them, You have all heard what this gentleman has to say. Now, if any of you want to go off with him to Yankeedoodledom, just say so, and you shall go without interruption. I ll bet you Sam against the sorriest hand on your plantation that not one of them would stir. You would be a fool for your pains, said Uncle Jack; I would make no such proposition to my people. Then, said my father, rising from his seat, it would appear that my mode of government yields the better result. But here s Sam with the horses. We ll ride over to Colonel Elliott s, and bring him back to dinner; and we ll have some whist and some music. The end of it was that Uncle Jack bought Sam. I don t think that, even with his free use of money, he would have gained the boy s consent, if Sam had not found out, I don t know how, that his purchase money would be of service to Marster. This, with my uncle s promise that he should see us every summer, and that he should not be sold...
